President

Tom Yawkey has become as vital to the Boston sporting scene as any figure in the city's long and illustrious sports history.

In 27 years of Yawkey ownership, the Red Sox have progressed from an insecure franchise to one of baseball's most solid holdings. Back in 1933, Tom Yawkey purchased the Red Sox and a ball park, both of them being far from the latest things in the big leagues.

Rebuilding was done not only on the park, but also on the team itself. Such stars as Lefty Grove, Jimmy Foxx, Bobby Doerr, Ted Williams, Tex Hughson, Vern Stephens, Johnny Pesky, Mel Parnell and so many others have paraded before Boston adherents under the Yawkey stewardship.

Expense has been no object in Mr. Yawkey's endeavor to produce the best. His baseball fortunes have not always prospered, to be sure, and baseball men have openly admired the patience and type of ownership presented by "T.A.", as he is known to intimates.

Thomas Austin Yawkey was born in Detroit, Feb. 21, 1903. He early came under the magnetic spell of major league baseball since his foster-father, William H. Yawkey, a famed industrialist, served as President and owner of the Detroit Tigers during an era when some of the greatest stars in the history of the league were cavorting in the Motor City.

Tom Yawkey himself later played baseball at Irving School and Yale.

His interest in baseball never waivers. Though he spends considerable time in wildlife conservation, seldom does a day pass when he is not in telephone connection with Fenway Park to inquire of his own team's fortunes as well as the rest of the league.

Front office personnel at Fenway Park has learned to absorb the doings of the entire baseball picture. Out of a clear sky, "T.A." might ask about some pint-sized left hander in the Carolina League, or a hulking catcher in the Sophomore League.

Tom Yawkey has experienced disappointments. The playoff loss to the Indians in 1948 must have been hard to take. But he never said so.

The loss at the tag-end of the '49 season was a crusher. But he never said so.

Several years ago Tom Yawkey was honored by Boston's baseball writers as baseball's most valuable owner. A year ago Richard Cardinal Cushing referred to Mr. Yawkey as "Boston's own Mr. Baseball."

STANLEY R. "Bucky" HARRIS
Executive Vice-President and General Manager

General Manager

Bucky Harris

Just before the start of spring training for the 1960 Red Sox, Stanley R. "Bucky" Harris was starting his second year as chief aide to Thomas A. Yawkey in his capacity as General Manager and Executive Vice President. Bucky took over the post last year as successor to Joe Cronin, who was elevated to the Presidency of the American League.

Bucky had been with the Red Sox from the close of the 1956 season as a special assistant to Mr. Yawkey and Mr. Cronin.

In the main, Bucky Harris had been a manager after his playing days were ended although he had a short experience as General Manager of the Buffalo club of the International League. In general, few men have had the all-round experience in baseball that Bucky has been privileged to have.

Port Jervis, N. Y. was his birthplace on Nov. 8, 1896, but he was only six years old when the family moved to Pittston, Pa., and it was in that city that Bucky got his baseball start.

When he was 18, his professional career was under way, with Muskegon of the Central League, and so natural was his ability and so much did he impress that he was with the Washington Senators in the late days of the 1919 season. The following season his freshman year play established him as one of the game's outstanding second basemen.

More astonishing than his sensational playing was the announcement by President Clark Griffith that, starting the 1924 season, Bucky was to be the manager of his Washington team. The appointment came shortly after Bucky reached his 28th birthday.

That was the start of a long managerial career which was concluded at the close of the 1956 season when he rejoined the Red Sox which team he had managed in the 1934 season. Under his guidance, Washington won pennants his first two years at the helm, and he was manager of the pennant winning 1947 New York Yankees.

He served for 18 seasons as Washington manager, was leader of the Detroit Tigers for seven seasons, managed the Yankees two seasons; and in his season as head of the Red Sox, directed the club to a fourth place finish, the highest position in the standings the club had attained in 16 years. The 1943 season saw him in the National League for the first and only time, as the manager of the Philadelphia Phillies.

IT'S ALL YOURS AS USUAL—Bucky Harris was delighted when Ted Williams said he would play again this season and had No. 9's uniform ready for him.

Front Office Staff

RICHARD H. O'CONNELL

Dick O'Connell is Business Manager of the Red Sox and Fenway Park. His first connection with the team was in 1946 when he became Business Manager of the Lynn Red Sox of the New England League, an affiliate team. He came to Fenway Park in 1948 as Director of Park Operations and he took over all business affairs of the Red Sox in 1959. He is a Boston College graduate, class of 1936. He served in the Navy as a Lieutenant Commander in World War II. He makes his home at Belmont, Mass.

JOHN M. MALANEY

Jack Malaney, Director, Public Relations, was a veteran of many years of newspaper work when he joined the Red Sox staff. He covered the games and activities of the Red Sox for nearly two-score years. He was President of the Baseball Writers' Association of America in 1944, and was official scorer of seasonal World Series and All-Star games. He had been occupied with press liaison for the Red Sox before assuming his present duties. His home is in West Roxbury, Mass.

THOMAS B. DOWD

Tom Dowd has the fascinating job as Traveling secretary of the Red Sox. A portion of his work is the often fantastic chore of the mass movement over thousands of miles of traveling involving the schedule demands of the Red Sox. A native of Worcester, Mass., Tom is a Holy Cross graduate, 1923. He is in fine repute as a speaker and toastmaster, has been a football official for years, and in recent seasons has acted as a radio commentator in football. His home is in West Roxbury, Mass.

JOSEPH T. CUMMISKEY

Joe Cummiskey, Treasurer, has been with the Red Sox since 1948. He was graduated from Suffolk Law School in 1930. His prior experience includes accounting and law, and he was a Lieutenant-Commander in the Navy in World War II. He lives in Belmont, Mass.

Red Sox Manager

Bill Jurges

Bill Jurges was at the helm of the Red Sox this year during spring training for the first time. He became manager of the team July 4, 1959, after Mike Higgins had resigned the post he had held since the start of the 1955 season.

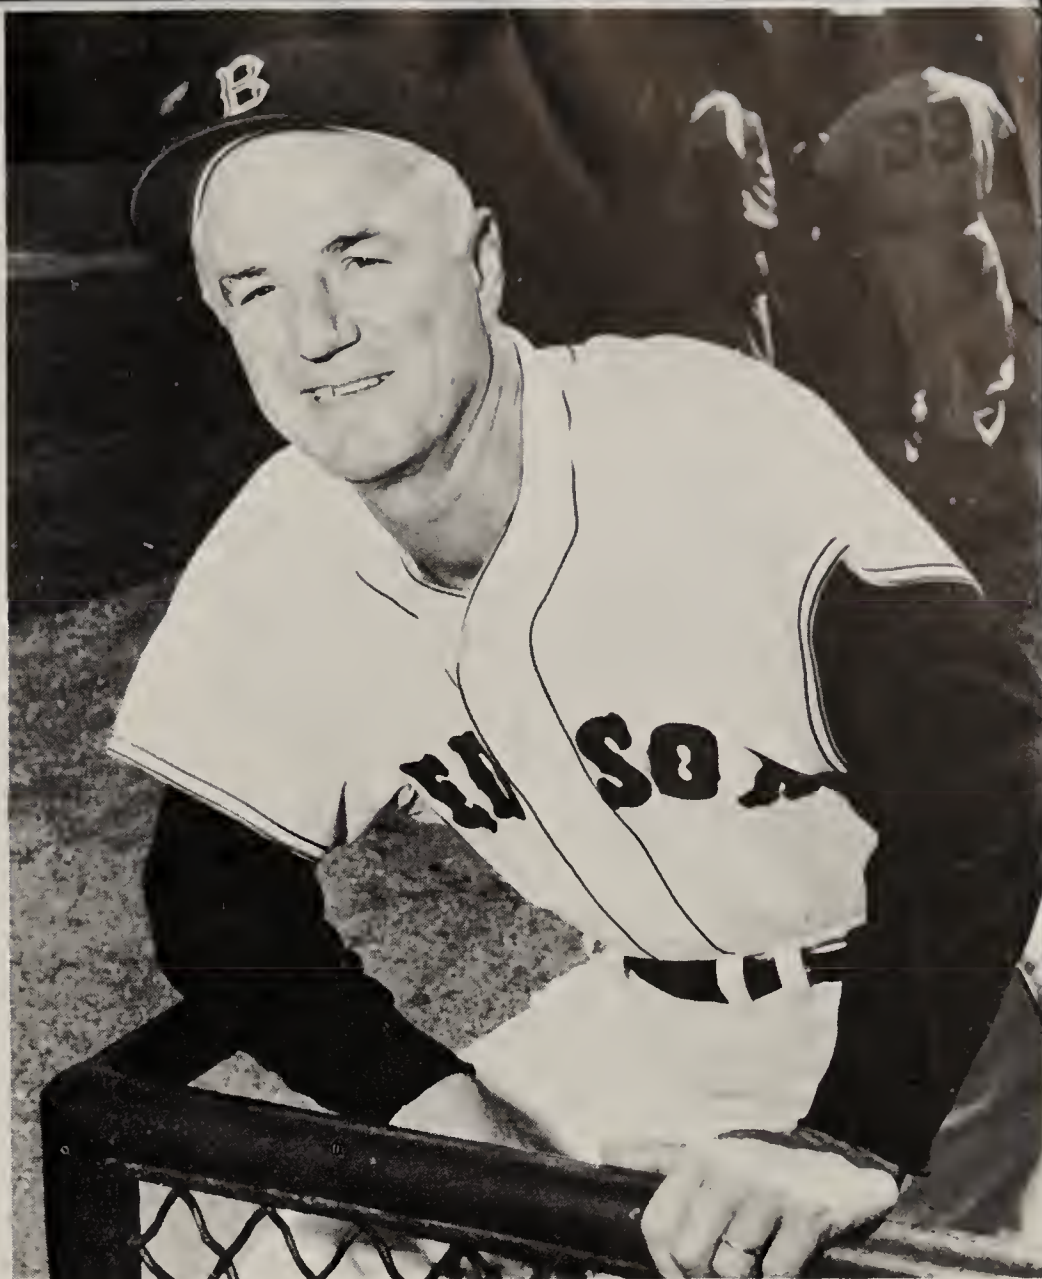

Jurges had amassed a reputation as one of the game's greatest shortstops. When his playing days were over, the business world beckoned to him, but it was not too long before he was back in the sport again.

He became a coach of the Washington Senators in 1956 as an aide and third base coach for Manager Charley Dressen and stayed on in the same capacities when Harry Lavagetto succeeded Dressen.

All of Jurges' major league playing career was in the National League, with the Chicago Cubs and the New York Giants. He was with the Cubs for nine years and a portion of another, and was seven years with the Giants.

Bill was born May 9, 1908 and grew up in Brooklyn, N. Y. He had started to work in a bank as a youngster, but the call to baseball was too great and he accepted when he received a chance to play with the Manchester, N. H. team of the New England League in 1927. The following year the Cubs became interested in him, acquired his contract and sent him to the Reading (Pa.) team for two seasons.

He reported to the Cubs in 1931, but spent part of that season with Louisville. Then he was back with the Cubs for a long stay—seven years. He was traded to the Giants in December, 1938.

Bill Jurges

He started the 1939 season as Giants' shortstop. On June 23, 1940, he was struck on the head by a Bucky Walters pitch and was out for the rest of that season. His stay with the Giants ended after the 1945 season when he was released by the Giants.

Jurges was with the Boston Braves under Billy Southworth for a short time during the spring of 1946 and then signed again with the Cubs for a two-year stay this time.

Actually, he had a successful tour of duty with the Red Sox after taking over last year. The team was in eighth place when he was given the control. At season's end, fifth place had been gained with the fourth place Tigers only a game ahead of Boston.

Jurges' record from July 4 to the end of the season was 44 victories against 36 defeats for a .550 percentage. Such a percentage for the entire season would have netted a third place finish.

JURGES TALKS TO THE PRESS—The manager briefed the members of the press when he was in Boston before spring training started.

Red Sox Coaches

DEL BAKER

Delmer David Baker is the dean of American League coaches. He managed Detroit's Tigers from August, 1938, through the 1942 seasons, and also has led teams in the Pacific Coast and Texas Leagues. He served as Red Sox coach from 1945 through 1948 and returned to the club in 1953 in a similar capacity. Usually has been first base coach, but will operate this season from the bench and alongside Manager Jurgens. Was born May 3, 1892, at Sherwood, Oregon.

BILLY HERMAN

Third base coach for the Red Sox will be Billy Herman, a teammate of Manager Jurgens in their many years together with the Chicago Cubs. The hot corner duty will not be new to Herman. He started at it with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1952 and through 1957, and he put in the past two seasons giving signs from third base for the Milwaukee Braves. Was born July 7, 1909 and now makes his home at Vero Beach, Fla.

RUDY YORK

Rudy York will be in his second year as a Red Sox coach. Soon convinced last spring that he could be of assistance to any man with a batting problem. Then he made himself valuable as a capable first base coach. Most of his playing was done in the spangles of the Detroit Tigers, but he was a member of the Red Sox in 1946 and was a factor in the winning of the pennant that year. Makes his home at Cartersville, Ga.

SAL MAGLIE

Starting first year as Red Sox pitching coach. Was with St. Louis Cardinals last spring as relief pitcher, but became pitching coach at cutdown time and resigned at close of season. Spent most of his big league career with New York Giants, but has been with several teams since he became a reliefer, pitching for the Yankees and Cleveland Indians among other teams. Born April 26, 1917, and makes home at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

"The Game For

By ERNIE HARWELL

This is a tribute to baseball. It is one of the few articles on the sport which hangs in the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

This article first appeared as an editorial in The Sporting News. It was reprinted later in a booklet published by the Chicago Roundtable, and has since appeared in many newspapers throughout the country. It has been included in "The Fireside Book of Baseball" which was edited by Charles Einstein and published by Simon and Schuster.

Ernie Harwell, its author, is a radio broadcaster of games and will be with the Detroit Tigers this year after six years with the Baltimore Orioles. He went to Baltimore with the return of big league baseball to that city after having broadcast the games of the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Giants.

Baseball is President Eisenhower tossing out the first ball of the season; and a pudgy schoolboy playing catch with his dad on a Mississippi farm.

It's the big league pitcher who sings in night clubs. And the Hollywood singer who pitches to the Giants in spring training.

A tall, thin old man waving a scoreboard from his dugout—that's baseball. So is the big, fat guy with a bulbous nose running out one of his 714 home runs with mincing steps.

It's America, this baseball. A re-issued newsreel of boyhood dreams. Dreams lost somewhere between boy and man. It's the Bronx cheer and the Baltimore farewell. The left field screen in Boston, the right field dump at Nashville's Sulphur Dell, the open stands in San Francisco, the dusty, wind-swept diamond at Albuquerque. And a rock home plate and a chicken wire backstop—anywhere.

There's a man in Mobile who remembers a triple he saw Honus Wagner hit in Pittsburgh 46 years ago. That's baseball. So is the scout reporting that a 16-year-old sandlot pitcher in Cheyenne is the new "Walter Johnson."

It's a wizened little man shouting insults from the safety of his bleacher seat. And a big, smiling first baseman playfully tousling the hair of a youngster outside the players' gate.

Baseball is a spirited race of man against man, reflex against reflex. A game of inches. Every skill is measured. Every heroic, every failing is seen and cheered—or booed. And then becomes a statistic.

In baseball, democracy shines its clearest. Here the only race that matters is the race to the bag. The creed is the rule book. Color is something to distinguish one team's uniform from another.

Baseball is Sir Alexander Fleming, discoverer of penicillin, asking his Brooklyn hosts to explain Dodger signals. It's Player Moe Berg speaking seven languages and working crossword puzzles in Sanskrit. It's a scramble in the box seats for a foul—and a $125 suit ruined. A man barking into a hot microphone about a cool beer, that's baseball. So is the sports writer telling a .383 hitter how to stride, and a 20-victory pitcher trying to write his impressions of the World Series.

Baseball is a ballet without music. Drama without words. A carnival without kewpie dolls.

All America''

A housewife in California couldn't tell you the color of her husband's eyes, but she knows that Yogi Berra is hitting .337, has brown eyes and used to love to eat bananas with mustard. That's baseball. So is the bright sanctity of Cooperstown's Hall of Fame. And the former big leaguer, who's playing out the string in a Class B loop.

Baseball is continuity. Pitch to pitch. Inning to inning. Game to game. Series to series. Season to season.

It's rain, rain, rain splattering on a puddled tarpaulin as thousands sit in damp disappointment. And the click of typewriters and telegraph keys in the press box—like so many awakened crickets. Baseball is a cocky batboy. The old-timer whose batting average increases every time he tells it. A lady celebrating a home team rally by mauling her husband with a rolled-up scorecard.

Baseball is the cool, clear eyes of Rogers Hornsby, the flashing spikes of Ty Cobb, an overaged pixie named Rabbit Maranville, and Jackie Robinson testifying before a Congressional hearing.

Baseball? It's just a game—as simple as a ball and a bat. Yet, as complex as the American spirit it symbolizes. It's a sport, business—and sometimes even religion.

Baseball is Tradition in flannel knickerbockers. And Chagrin in being picked off base. It is Dignity in the blue serge of an umpire running the game by rule of thumb. It is Humor, holding its sides when an errant puppy eludes two groundskeepers and the fastest outfielder. And Pathos, dragging itself off the field after being knocked from the box.

Nicknames are baseball. Names like Zeke and Pie and Kiki and Home Run and Cracker and Dizzy and Dazzy.

Baseball is a sweaty, steaming dressing room where hopes and feelings are as naked as the men themselves. It's a dugout with spike-scarred flooring. And shadows across an empty ball park. It's the endless list of names in box scores, abbreviated almost beyond recognition.

The holdout is baseball, too. He wants 55 grand or he won't turn a muscle. But, it's also the youngster who hitchhikes from South Dakota to Florida just for a tryout.

Arguments, Casey at the Bat, old cigarette cards, photographs, Take Me Out to the Ball Game—all of them are baseball.

Baseball is a rookie—his experience no bigger than the lump in his throat—trying to begin fulfillment of a dream. It's a veteran, too—a tired old man of 35, hoping his aching muscles can drag him through another sweltering August and September.

For nine innings, baseball is the story of David and Goliath, of Samson, Cinderella, Paul Bunyan, Homer's Iliad and the Count of Monte Cristo.

Willie Mays making a brilliant World Series catch. And then going home to Harlem to play stick-ball in the street with his teen-age pals—that's baseball. So is the husky voice of a doomed Lou Gehrig saying, "I'm the luckiest guy in the world."

Baseball is cigar smoke, hot-roasted peanuts, The Sporting News, winter trades, "Down in front," and the Seventh Inning Stretch. Sore arms, broken bats, a no-hitter, and the strains of the Star-Spangled Banner.

Baseball is a highly-paid Brooklyn catcher telling the nation's business leaders: "You have to be a man to be a big leaguer, but you have to have a lot of little boy in you, too."

This is a game for America, this baseball!

A game for boys and for men.

USUALLY, WHEN SPRING TRAINING STARTS, the community likes to have its mayor, the head of the Chamber of Commerce, or some such individual welcome the players and wish them luck. At Scottsdale, Ariz., where the Red Sox conditioned for a second consecutive spring, the Sheriff shows up with a couple of his deputies and they lead the initial jog around the field. There were just batterymen in this group of Sox.

Spring Training

SOMETHING NEW TO THE RED SOX was added this year. Manager Bill Juries was of the opinion that too much practice was not possible so a pitching machine was purchased. Coach Rudy York was the first commanding officer in charge of "Iron Mike". Pitchers could practice bunting by the hour and did so. This "pitcher" never got tired. All "he" needed was electricity.

SCOTTSDALE, ARIZ., IS GETTING RED SOX CONSCIOUS. One of the events the committee put on was a beauty contest with the winner to be known as Miss Red Sox. Miss Marion Danforth, the first young lady on the left, was the winner with a group of Red Sox players acting as the judges.

GEE-GEE

Born: April 4, 1937, Sand Ridge, Ill. Ht.: 6'; Wt.: 165 lbs. Brown eyes; Black hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Sand Ridge, Ill.

Was the surprising member of the 1959 spring training camp squad and voted the outstanding player during that conditioning period . . . Had come to the Red Sox Dec. 2, 1958, from Cleveland along with Vic Wertz in the trade for Jimmy Piersall, and having had only limited experience as an outfielder, it was believed he would be sent out for more experience . . . Continued his flashy play as season started and became regular center fielder late in season . . . Won four games late in season with clutch hits, three of them homers which defeated Tigers, Orioles and Yankees . . . Started pro baseball career as a pitcher and had a 20-7 record in 1955 . . . went into military service shortly after 1959 season ended for six months' service and should be available before spring training is completed.

Covering The Red Sox

Boston's many newspapers, well aware of the great interest the people of this area take in baseball, go to extremes in the coverage of the sport, and many cities adjacent to Boston keep pace in that coverage throughout the baseball season.

The result is that Fenway Park's Press Box is one of the busiest in the country from opening day of each season until the curtain goes down in the early Fall.

Each of the Boston papers usually has from two to five men on the job daily, covering the game or doing a feature or a human interest story; and writers from surrounding communities, Worcester, Providence, Springfield, Hartford, Lowell, Manchester, N.H., for example, as well as from the news services which supply the nation with coverage also can be found at the games.

A large delegation of baseball experts and reporters follows the team on all its games away from Boston.

On this page is a list of the Boston members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America of which Boston's chapter is one of the largest units.

On The Air

The Red Sox will have a new line-up for their radio-TV crew during the 1960 season. Curt Gowdy will serve as the Sox number one announcer for the 10th successive season. This year he will be assisted by Art Gleeson, nationally known sportscaster. Gleeson replaces Bob Murphy, who moved to Baltimore. Bill Crowley will be back again as combination statistician-announcer.

Curt Gowdy is a household name in New England because of his Red Sox broadcasts. He is also rated as one of the nation's best sportscasters. Aside from baseball he handles football and basketball on the NBC-TV network. Gowdy lists as broadcasting credits such blue-ribbon events as the World Series, All-Star game, the important football bowl games, Army-Navy game and other top events.

Art Gleeson served as sports director for the Mutual Broadcasting System, and also broadcasted the Mutual "Game of the Day" for six years. He has been a baseball broadcaster for over 20 years and was a former player and front office member.

Bill Crowley, the third member of the Red Sox team, also serves as publicity director of athletics at Holy Cross College. This will be his third season with the Red Sox.

Sponsoring the Red Sox games will be the Narragansett Brewing Co., the Atlantic Refining Co. and the Ford Dealers of New England.

The broadcasts will be originated throughout New England by WHDH radio in Boston and WHDH-TV on the TV network.

Red Sox

FARM SYSTEM HEADQUARTERS—Johnny Murphy, Director of the Red Sox farm system, keeps a constant check on all the players and he is seen in this picture checking with Eddie Kenney, Office Manager of the System, and his secretary, Mrs. Ruth Stewart.

There were six teams comprising the Farm System in 1959 and they had the best record of all such systems. There were three pennant winners out of the six and two other teams finished in second place.

As a result, John J. Murphy, one of baseball's greatest all-time relief pitchers in his playing days, is not making any change in the Farm System or the minor league managers. Murphy is in control of the entire farm organization.

Minneapolis' Millers will be the top affiliate team again as it has been the past few years, and Gene Mauch, formerly a Red Sox infielder, will guide the destinies of the players who are only one step away from the big leagues. The Millers finished second in seasonal play last year and were defeated in the "Little World Series" by Havana in seven games. They were on their way to sweeping through American Association play last season when it was decided to bring several of the team's top performers up to the parent club in July.

Allentown of the Eastern League, the Class A team in the system, finished second in its race and bowed in the playoffs.

Raleigh, of the Carolina League, sparked by the sensational batting prowess of a first year boy, Carl Yastrzemski, won its pennant. Waterloo, in the Midwest League, had a split season and won both halves.

1959 MILLERS

KNEELING: Jahn Goryl, Ted Bowsfield, Ed Sadowski, Red Robbins, Herb Plews, Joe Macko and Lu Clinton.

FRONT: Batboys Babby Anderson and Roger Miller.

Farm System

The most sensational showing was by the Class D Alpine team of the Sophomore League which was head and shoulders above its competition and won its pennant by 34½ games. It had two pitchers with 20 or more victories, Don Schwall with 23 and Gary Modrell with 20, and the team batting average was .290.

All players excepting those assigned to the Minneapolis roster are assembled for spring training at Ocala, Fla., with the Millers working at Deland, Fla. At Ocala, Murphy and his corps of assistants, the managers and top members of the scouting staff, decide to which teams the players will be assigned.

A group of 28 scouts will be combing every sector of the country for prospective material with a Cuban scout having been added with other new members of that staff. Willard Nixon and Harry Dorish, former Red Sox pitchers whose pitching days are completed, and Paul Schreiber, former Red Sox batting practise pitcher and coach, are new additions, and Conrado Marrero, formerly a major league pitcher, will cover the Cuban territory.

The Red Sox Farm System organization is thorough in every respect and the youngsters who became part of it are fortunate. Their early baseball life, both in spring training and throughout the regular season, will take place amid major league-like surroundings, patterned on those enjoyed by the parent club. The progress of the players is checked continually, and personal assistance in every way is available to them at all times.
